Separate votes will be allowed on several of the more important schedules, such as lumber, coal, hides and possibly iron ore. The belief prevails also that the committee will report an amendment removing the duty placed on tea in the bill as reported and eliminating the countervailing duty on coffee. The House is almost unanimous in opposition to taxes on "the breakfast table."

The committee is not disposed to increase the internal revenue tax on beer and a vote on this proposition will be prevented if possible. The Payne bill contams only two propositions affecting the internal revenue taxation. These are the tax on inheritances and the provision inadding to the list of articles taxed inground that as far as possible Congress should avoid direct taxation.

Flax growing in the Northwest, it is represented, has thriven marvellously under present tariff conditions. The mills grinding the product are assured of good crops every year, and they look with disfavor on the proposal that the drawback provision shall apply to flax, inasmuch as that would in effect result in foreign flax coming into the United States duty free. So the Northwestern mill owners who grind flax and the farmers who raise it have told their Representatives in the told their Representatives in Congress of what they believe to be a purpose on the part of Standard Oil to drive the flax industry of the Northwest to the wall. SENSATIONALISM IN CHURCH.

Bishop Condems That and Slang in Pulpits and Long Ministerial Visits.

Sensationalism in church service, use of slang in the pulpit, scolding of congregations, constant references to cards, theatres and dancing, long ministerial visits and sermons on popular topics instead of on Biblical utterances were some of the things condemned by Bishop Neely at the opening of the third day's session of the Newark Methodist Conference in Newark yesterday. The Bishop also took occasion to flay boards of trustees that interfere in the spiritual life of their respective congregations.

"The board of trustees have less to do than any other board in the church," he said. "The stewards and leaders have more to do than they, but this is probably well known."

Here the Bishop was interrupted by pastor who exclaimed: "All do not know it!"

"Then it is time they did know it," the Bishop declared. "I would advise that pastor now and then to preach a sermon on the policy of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

This Bishop directed his other remarks to the Rev. William H. Evans of Stewartsville, the Rev. Frederick C. W. Ramoth of Coleville, Arthur H. Limouze of Ridgefield Park, and the Rev. Edward C. Gisriel of Drew Seminary, four probationers who were admitted as members of the conference. The Bishop advised them to dress and act like ministers at all times and to take care of their health by getting plenty of exercise, fresh air and being temperate in eating.

"Stock speculation and gratification of literary tastes by ministers should not be tolerated," Bishop Neely averred.

"A side story was good, but a motive to enter the ministry to do other than the one work for which the whole life should one work for which the whole life should be sacrificed was a great error. Sen-sationalism is overstimulation, and over-stimulation kills men and will kill

Bishop also delivered an address before the Laymen's Association, which opened its eleventh annual convention at the Park Presbyterian Church, with more than 150 delegates present. There is a place for the laymen, he said, and a place for the ministry, and they do not collide when they stay in their places.

"We need each other. We need the preacher and we need the people to support the church in another sense as well as in the financial sense. The laymen ought to encourage church work by say-ing, when they felt it, that a sermon was good. I like the layman who seeks to be elected to the board of trustees or

Marine Battalion Held Up in Prospect Park.

A mounted policeman held up Major Henry C. Davis and his battalion of marines from the Brooklyn navy yard yesterday as they were marching through Prospect next thing he knew he was in the shally before the fire.

The yard hands thought he had had enough punishment and instead of turning him over to the police helped him to the street and he started down-him to the street and he would let them continue if they would be them.
